PROJECT

LabVio: A Web-Based AI Laboratory Result Analysis System

August - March 2026

Thesis Researcher/Developer

- LabVio is a web-based health analysis system built using JavaScript/TypeScript for application logic.
 - The user interface is developed using HTML5 standards through React, ensuring a responsive and user-friendly experience.
 - The backend uses Node.js and Express for API and data handling, with Firebase Firestore as the database for storing lab results, user data, and analysis records.
 - The system integrates OCR for extracting text from lab test images and utilizes pre-trained Python-based machine learning models deployed on Hugging Face and exposed as an HTTP API, which are called by the system to generate health insights without training models from scratch.
